

LUNCHROOM MAN FIGHTS IN COURT

Defendant Claims He Is Not Proprietor, But Manager.

QUESTIONS INTENT OF HEALTH LAW

Charges Animosity on Part of Inspector—Two Owners Are Fined $2 Each.

After several trials and convictions of persons operating unclean lunch rooms, as a result of the crusade recently begun, the hearing of a similar charge against the manager of the Maryland Quick Lunch, in the Police Court this morning, developed a stubborn resistance along technical lines.

When William Plumber, defendant, was called, Attorney Peters questioned the legality of holding Mr. Plumber on the ground that he was the manager and not the proprietor of the place involved. The police regulations, Attorney Peters claimed, provide that the "occupant" of a given place must be named. The proprietor, or occupant, of this place, he said, is John J. Noonan, who conducts and owns several other places, and, therefore, the information against Mr. Plumber was null and void.

Mr. Peters asked a postponement of the case until this evening to gather material supporting his contention that Plumber is illegally held, and Judge Ankum acceded to the request. Assistant District Attorney Fugh, in insisting that the trial proceed, cited several instances in support of his contention. The arguments are to be continued tonight, and Judge Ankum will render his decision.

One Prosecuting Witness.

The government put but one witness on the stand, Inspector Gallagher, who inspected the lunchroom, and who, upon evidence secured therefrom, swore out the warrant. Six witnesses were called by the defense.

Mr. Gallagher swore that upon making an investigation he found that the lower portions of the walls were filthy and greasy, and that an apparatus in the center of the place, on which were a number of pots, kettles, and other cooking utensils, was in an unnecessarily unclean condition. His statement to the court was concise and sweeping. The most important claim, and one which caused a stir in the crowded court room, was that in one of the kitchen table drawers in which were rags, he found vermin and other signs of filth. He said that he called Manager Plumber's attention to this, and that the latter said:

"Well, I must see that this is remedied at once."

"I asked Mr. Plumber what these rags were used for," continued Gallagher, "and he told me that they were used to wipe off the apparatus in the kitchen. Just exactly what he meant by the apparatus I am not certain, but I supposed he meant utensils and other appurtenances of the business."

Charges Animosity.

In the cross-examination of Gallagher Attorney Peters said he would attempt to show that animosity prompted Mr. Gallagher to make the investigation and take the action he did. He also attempted to show that the Inspector was incompetent and incapable of judging the real meaning of cleanliness in a lunchroom, and that he made his inspection immediately after the rush supper hour, when it was impossible for the scullions to have cleaned things.

Mr. Peters then raised the question as to the legality of naming Plumber and also whether it was in the province of the regulations to apply the section covering the case to lunch rooms. He read that portion (section 6 B), in which it names the places to be governed, viz., slaughter houses, markets, stalls, and other places for the preparing of food products. This he said made it inapplicable to the conducting of lunch rooms. His point was overruled and an exception noted.

Mr. Plumber was the next witness called, and upon the conclusion of his direct and cross-examination, District Attorney Fugh said that it was a significant fact that he had neither denied the presence of the vermin in the rags, nor had his attorney asked him directly concerning this important item. Upon being recalled he denied that the vermin were showed to him by Gallagher.

NATIONAL GUARD IN SHAM BATTLE

CAMP HAYS, GETTYSBURG, Pa., July 22.—Led by Col. J. B. Cornell, commander of the Sixth Regiment, Pennsylvania National Guard, the "Brown Army" today began an advance on Gettysburg to wrest the town from the control of the "Blue" forces under Col. Hamilton D. Turner.

The boys in blue marched as far as Willowby's Run, took up a defensive position, and prepared to meet the opposing army. The battle was a good imitation of the real thing.

The Third Brigade broke camp today, its members leaving for home.

SKELETONS RATTLE AS PLOT THICKENS

Gould Perjury Proceedings
Promise Sensational Developments.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Many a skeleton is rattling today in the closets of those concerned in the alleged plot to obtain false testimony in the suit of Mrs. Frank Jay Gould against her millionaire husband. Tomorrow in the Tombs police court Mrs. Ben Teal, wife of Charles Frohman's general stage manager; Miss Julia Fleming, her companion, and Harry Mausley, a private detective, will be charged with attempting to induce Mabel McCausland to swear falsely that she had seen Gould in a compromising position in the apartments of Bessie De Voe, a dancer well known on Broadway. "My wife's arrest is an outrage," said Teal this morning. "I will make those responsible suffer for it."

In answer to the threat, Gould's attorneys have dug up what they allege is a record of Mrs. Teal's life in St. Paul, Minn., which they say will furnish spicy reading when it is bared by the district attorney.

In addition to this, Frances Hale, a hair dresser, has been brought forward to declare that money was offered her to tell just such a story about Gould as the McCausland girl declares was concocted by Mrs. Teal and her companions in woe.

It is also reported that the arrest of Mrs. Teal has something to do with stories told by two Nova Scotian witnesses whose recital of occurrences alleged to have occurred when Frank Gould and a party of guests visited parts of that province, were expected to make a divorce for the millionaire's wife a certainty.

The departure last night of these witnesses from their homes and the fact that their testimony is not now desired by Mrs. Gould's attorneys, is declared to have hinged, in a way, on the Teal arrest.

Frank Gould and his wife are silent, and Bessie De Voe, whose evidence is going to prove in unraveling things, has disappeared. It is declared, however, that she has notified the district attorney that she will appear to tell her story.

Meantime Mrs. Fleming is in the Tombs. It is said she will be held after the hearing of the case against Mrs. Teal tomorrow.

tons' wealthiest men. In addition to his newspaper and gas interests he is a controlling factor in three of the largest banking institutions here, and a heavy investor in real estate. His suburban home, Friendship, in the outskirts of Washington, is a beautiful place.

Congressman and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth spent their honeymoon there, and it is expected that the young couple will spend the fall at that place. Mr. McLean's city home is at Fifteenth and I streets, northwest.
